

The Meaning of Entangled

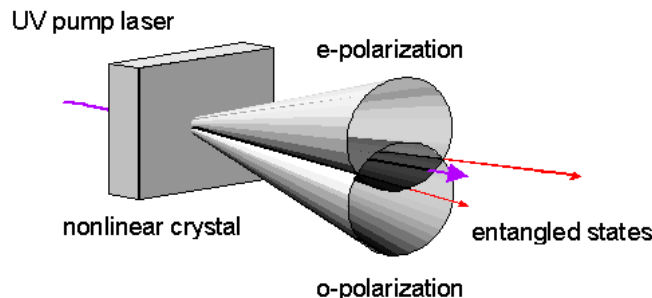

...and together they found true joy in the essence of life. It was as if the two shared one heart and they had finally come home to rest. That is the feeling of Entanglement. No matter what your connection is, be it friends, family, lovers, soul mates or twin souls, the feeling of being loved without conditions is a freeing experience and the most joy you will ever feel. This union is not about human love or gender; it is about divine love using two portals to create and spread a vibration of unconditional love. It surpasses all feelings of fear and separation and is a living example of divine creation expressing itself in complete joy.

This symbol was manifested from a vision and buried within its lines are many treasures. Its meaning is revealed as each aspect is uncovered. It symbolizes the beauty of oneness and is filled with sacred geometry.

The name Entangled was given to this symbol long before its meaning became known to us. It simply felt like the right name at that time. As usual, we found the reason after it happened and then it all made sense to us. It turns out that there is something called Quantum Entanglement which was first discovered by Einstein who called it "spooky action at a distance" and it is currently being validated by scientists all over the world. In definition, entangled particles remain connected and the actions of one affect the other faster than the speed of light, even when separated by great distances. In other words, once you become entangled, you have a direct connection regardless of space and time.

Below is a graphic showing two photons in an entangled state. The geometry is amazingly similar to the Entangled symbol.

Entangled Photons

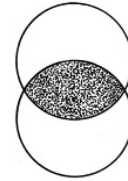

The symbol begins with two yin–yang shapes that represent two souls. One is in the opposite image of the other because they each carry different dominant forces within them. They overlap at the center point of their two outer circles and are spinning in opposite directions. The overlapped area forms the shape of a Vesica Piscis and symbolizes a state of fusion, shared vision and mutual understanding. It is also known as the union of heaven and earth and the mirror of the soul.

Vesica Piscis

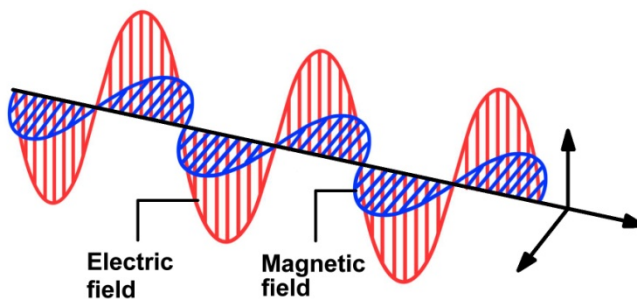

“The Vesica Piscis is the form created when two circles connect and yet divide each other through their centres: ... within this oval form between the two circles, is found the mathematical ratio that creates the synergy of magnetic (female) and electrical energy (male) that actually creates the electromagnetic spectrum, or LIGHT itself. Is it any wonder then, that the Vesica Piscis is exactly the shape of the EYE? After all, it is the window through which we can view light and the reflection of creation...and when we join two circles, we have the image of light, and actually create the vibration of 3, or the trinity.”
 ~Rosalind Pape, Blueprint4Creation.com

The two opposite areas within a yin–yang are known as divine forces and have been described as electric and magnetic, positive and negative, male and female, night and day, etc. The idea is that there is a balance in life and one half cannot exist without the other. The more balanced you are the more complete you will feel. These divine forces have definite charges and are present in all of creation. Within us, one divine force is more dominant than the other so when you connect with that special someone, they will most likely have the opposite dominant force and you will feel a completeness that didn’t exist before. We each have something to learn from the other. This is how we grow to become whole within ourselves. It is the mirror of the other that always reflects the truth of who we are and teaches us that love always sees more love when it sees it in itself.

Below you can see, within the Entangled symbol there is an electromagnetic wave pattern found in the dividing line that runs from top to bottom between the two divine forces or energies. When electric and magnetic energy interact, they propel off each other in a spiral motion. The waves are made up of oscillating, or vibrating, electric and magnetic fields that change with certain frequencies. Together they produce waves of energy that create light. This electromagnetic interaction can be related to the “Trinity of Creation” where the joining of two (electric with magnetic) always creates a third new entity (light). This is the essence of all creation and the basis of the transformation that takes place when two become entangled.

Electromagnetic Waves

There is a new energy or vibration of joy that is felt after the energies of two souls merge. A double helix is shown to represent a pattern of DNA strands and the symbol of infinity. The spiral of the double helix creates a vortex of energy or love that crosses over the heart center or zero point of the two entangled souls. The zero point is believed to be the center of the soul or the sacred point of contact where human and divine meets in communion.

Infinity Symbol

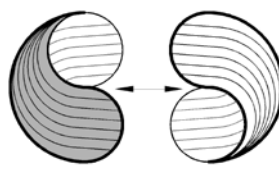

If you remove the two yin yang shapes within the outer circle and look at the double helix that remains, you will see the shape of a larger yin–yang on the front side and its mirror image on the back. This represents the new third energy that is created because the two are Entangled. The shape then becomes spherical as if each half is perpendicular and wrapped around the other, almost like a hug. This shows the oneness and harmony of their heart connection and the complete balance they bring to each other. Also, as the two souls continue to move toward each other, they become synergetic which means that the whole is greater than the sum of its two individual parts. So the positive energy that is created by Englangled souls is greater than the energy of the two individuals added together.

The final aspect of this symbol is the outer circle. It is drawn as a band with a 360–degree twist that gives it a spiraling spinning effect. The twist signifies the intertwining or binding of two souls in infinite motion with no beginning and no end. This could also be seen as a double torus energy structure which is an electromagnetic field that surrounds each one of us in a continuous spiraling motion. It is here we are nurtured in the womb of creation, growing in love, filled with joy, and absolutely entangled as one.
